

Chelsea Muise

Chelsea was born and raised in a Forest Service family and has always had a passion for connecting people with the natural world. She started working seasonally on the White Mountain National Forest in New Hampshire and the Ottawa National Forest in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan in recreation and wilderness. After receiving her degree in Parks and Recreation Management from Northern Arizona University, she accepted a permanent position at Midewin National Tallgrass Prairie, Illinois, as the environmental education/interpretive specialist before moving to the Tonto National Forests in Arizona where she served as the Assistant Resources Staff on the Payson and Pleasant Valley Ranger Districts. She then moved to the Pacific Northwest and served as the Recreation Program Lead at Mount St. Helens National Volcanic Monument located on the Gifford Pinchot National Forest before returning to Arizona and the Kaibab National Forest, where she served as the Recreation, Lands, and Mineral Program Manager. She is currently serving as the Rocky Mountain Region's Wilderness, Wild & Scenic Rivers and Congressionally Designated Areas Program Manager. Chelsea enjoys hiking with her dog, skiing, and caving as well as traveling to scenic locations both near and far.
